

Beethoven (Classic Reprint)

To the Municipality of Vienna, Feb. 1, 1819.) THE air is heavy around us. The world is stifled by a thick and vitiated atmosphere an undignified materialism which weighs on the mind and heart hindering the work of governments and individuals alike. We are being suffocated. Let us throw open the windows that God's free air may come in, and that we may breathe the breath of heroes. Life is stern. It is a daily battle for those not content with an unattractive mediocrity of soul. And a sad battle it is, too, for many a combat without grandeur, without happiness, fought in solitude and silence.
